Attachment

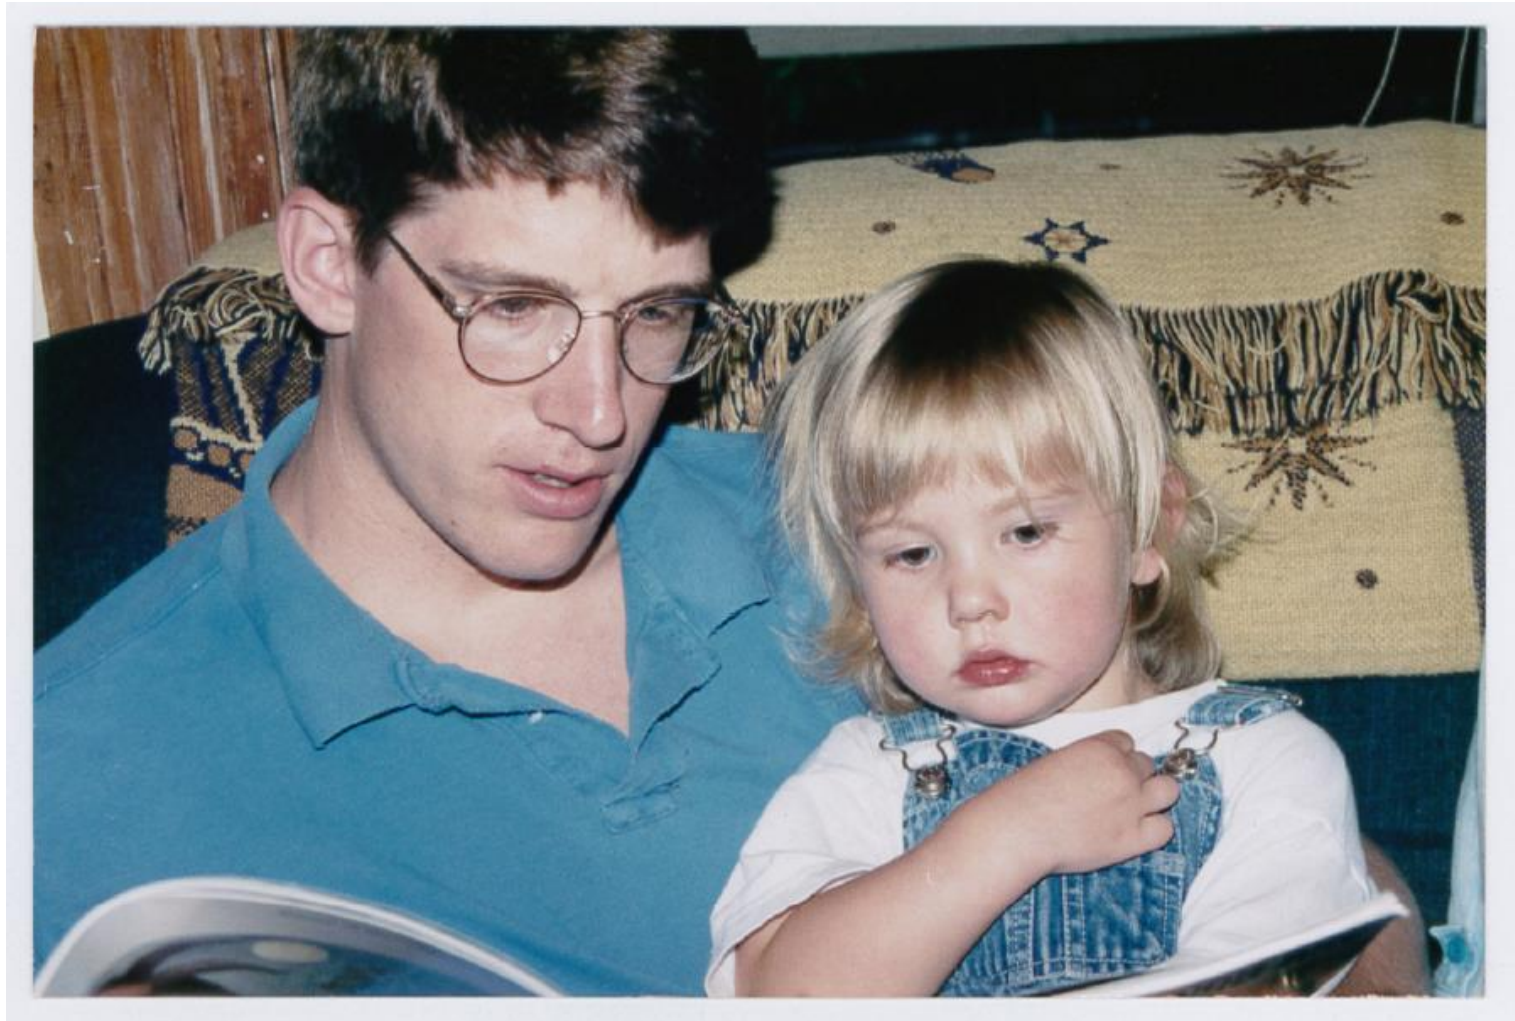

- John Bowlby a pioneer in attachment theory he suggested “ A mother is vital for the child’s stability”
- He formulated the “attachment theory”
- The most important part of his theory was that children need at least one primary caregiver for social and emotional development to occur normally.
- The primary caregiver will be there for the child in stressful situations (or in close proximity)
- Children become attached to adults who are sensitive and responsive in social interactions with them, and who remain as consistent caregivers for some months
- Children begin to use attachment figures (familiar people) as a secure base to explore from and return to
